STRESS CHILD WELFARE AT TRI-CO., PTA MEET

Over 200 persons, coming from DuPage, Will and Kankakee counties, attended the annual conference of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers held in the St. John Evangelical church in Mokena all day Wednesday, as guests of the Mokena PTA.

Mrs. A. Y. Wilson, of Joliet was in charge calling the first session to order at 9:30 a. m. followed by invocation by the pastor of the church, Rev. Wm. Rieman. Mrs. Albert Cappel, principal of the Mokena Grade school gave the address of welcome which was responded to by Mrs. Wilson.

After the introducing of chairmen of the State organization, Mrs. Bruce Smyth of Blue Island, first vice president of the I.C.P.T., spoke on the theme, "Security for Every Child."

She said that everyone should be alert to the conditions in our communities, and when they are not commendable, should be studied to correct. Mention was made of the responsibility of parents. The speaker said, "Parenthood is the last unskilled job in the world." Parents should not be too busy with the social activities so as not to hear what their child is trying to say. Every child should have a task and trained so as to be able to fit into the world in adult life in which they are going to have to live. Too many adults have Big Shot ideas and this was taboored.

In order that the child will have security in their adult life, the parents should strive for a secure world, free from race prejudice and a job for all. Mention was made of the majority of juvenile delinquency came from the good families and homes, according to the 1944 survey.

Round table conferences were held in the morning for each department of the PTA at the close of which a bountiful chicken dinner was served by the Women's Guild of the church.

The afternoon session opened with community singing led by Mrs. J. W. Heylman of Oak Park.

The main part of the afternoon program was the symposium and discussion taken part in by Mrs. Duncan McPheeters of Downers Grove, Mrs. Leonard Graf, of Villa Park, Mrs. Heylman and Dr. Chas. E. Howell, DeKalb, chairman of Juvenile Protection and Mrs. Bruce Smyth leader of the round table.

The speakers brought out at this time, the importance of a good home, not to tie a child too closely to the mother's apron string, to have our homes secure emotionally, socially, etc.; by good examples of parents; that parents should see that their children develop healthy bodies and minds, learn to live for others, not being selfish; recreation should be provided in the homes; each parent should see his or her own faults not the faults of others, paraphrasing the spiritual, "It's me O Lord, standing in the need of understanding and appreciation."

The economical problem was mentioned to see that each child was given help who came from homes where that help was not possible. Mention was made of the fact, that many boys, had their first new suit when they entered the Service of our Country.

Dr. Howell said, "We assume something ought to be done for the security of the child, but don't do anything about it. We must get over being lazy—mentally, socially and morally." He mentioned that children do some things they do, because we don't hold them to some responsibility.

And all these things it seemed to us, presented the idea of the breaking down of the American home, which is the fault of not being good parents. When asked how parents can be trained, Dr. Howell said, "the start in that line should be when they are seven years old."

In answer to the question, "How can we get the PTA to do something about this problem, of parents training children properly?" Dr. Howell said "It is going to take some great catastrophe to wake people up."

Seems like that will be the only way unless we the people, realize our dependence upon a higher power than ourselves, forgetting the idea of being a Big Shot and listen to the still small voice which leads us in only proper ways, love being the key note.

Forgetting this higher principle of life, is the cause of the debased conditions of the countries of France and Italy today.

Thousands Attend Tinley Centennial and See Giant Parade Sunday Afternoon

Tinley Park is now on its second hundred year and instead of feeling old is just getting into stride.

The Centennial of the past week was a gala affair and when it comes to picking perfect weather—the committee must have had a stand in with the weather man or charmed the elements with a rabbit's foot.

The opening night Friday, was chilly and the attendance was rather small but Saturday night the weather was warmer and the attendance was over double of that of the night before.

A fine and unique feature of the outdoor show Saturday night was the human album. Mrs. Wm. Clemens was the reader and as she recalled in a reminiscent mood the various members of the family the characters were portrayed on the stage by local talent. A huge album stood upright on the stage and as the various characters were named by the reader, Art Linsted opened the huge album and there stood the character attired in the costumes of long ago.

Quite a number of fine acts and specialty numbers were presented on this open air stage. Selby Hirsch served as master of ceremonies and did justice to the job in hand.

Sunday was the great day. The weather was warm and there was not a cloud in the sky. Police Chief C. A. Steinhagen counted 2600 autos in town through the afternoon and evening and the total attendance was estimated from 10,000 to 19,000 people.

The parade was the key feature and was very outstanding. The line of march formed south of town at Mel's Service Station and proceeded north on Oak Park Ave., to the Memorial Park where it disbanded. The color guards of the local Legion and VFW posts and the drum and bugle corp of Blue Island headed the parade. Among the various floats were the following:

Tinley Park Boy Scouts covered wagon, Wannemacher and Rothenberg local well drillers with replica of old oaken bucket and rustic well top made of logs, old time horse with all the trappings owned by Folker Bros. of Frankfort and drawn by a team driven by Edwin Hirsch of Hirsch Bros. Funeral Home, a Ford of 1921 vintage resembling the open air taxi. Tinley Park Times float showing old time hand press the forerunner of the present printing plant; old time surrey driven by Wm. Twitemeyer of Sedan Prairie. This was the same rig he drove to his own wedding over 40 years ago a hayrack by the Men's Club of the St. George Church. This float resembled a barn dance party with bales of straw and couples dancing to the music of a concertina. All were dressed in costumes of way back when. John Hotchkiss drove this float and all had a most jolly time.

Other floats were by Bettenhausen Hardware Store, Tinley Park PTA, Service Bakery, Vogt, Dept. Store, INR, Beatty Lumber Co., Tinley Park Coal and Feed, old baby buggy by Raschke's, Tinley Park Fire Dept. old time hose cart and modern fire truck, H. A. Boeckstein John Deere dealer, Tinley Park Dairy new management and one of the most beautiful exhibits was the Wilson and Co. famous six-horse hitch with the finest specimens of horse flesh by way of famed Clydsdale thoroughbreds.

When the parade wound up at the Memorial Park a circle was formed and the six-horse hitch was in the center. Following talks by Rev. Alb. Buddenhagen, Rev. Frank Anderson, Rev. Fitzpatrick and Prof. A. Fierke, stressing recreation and the need of the Memorial Park, the six horse hitch performed a number of feats. Prizes were to be awarded to anyone guessing near the correct weight of the hitch. Mrs. Clida Deadmore of Joliet and Henry Kohler of Tinley Park were the closest guessers, their estimate of the total weight being 12,100 lbs. and the correct weight being 12,115 lbs. but as they were not present when their names were called out later in the evening, they failed to get the prizes.

The Saenger Hall had a wonderful array of old time historical relics gathered from around Tinley Park and vicinity. The Vogt family had some highly interesting old time store exhibits, pictures etc. A coffee mill salvaged from the great Chicago fire was quite a curiosity.

The illustrated history of Tinley Park received quite a play and hundreds of copies were sold. Some copies are still available at the Tinley Park Times office in Tinley Park and at the News-Bulletin office in Mokena.

Dancing was also enjoyed to the music of the Rhythm Teasers of Harvey.

Last but not least was the excellent police force which maintained order and decorum with Roy Hannum serving as the old time squire dispensing justice.

Just what the total proceeds are has not been determined. A meeting is to be held tonight to go into the general accounting of the financial end.

The proceeds as stated before will go to pay for the land on which Memorial Park is located as a community memorial to all the boys and girls from Tinley Park who were in the service of their country during the great World War II.

Another enjoyable part on the program was the dog named Palsy Walsy, who danced on the stage Saturday night and drew great applause. This dog and four other dogs who have been with the Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey circus, belong to Mr. W. R. Luke who resides on the Kipp farm in Tinley Park. Palsy Walsy is 16 years old and is part fox.

More New Lenox School Picture Letters

New Lenox, Ill.
Sept. 24, 1945

Dear Mr. Semmler:

I am enclosing a short write up about the old school picture in last week's Bulletin.

We do not happen to have a picture like it but have one of the downstairs room taken at the same time.

Mrs. Sadie Cooper has a school picture dating farther back which she got among some things she bought at Hilton's sale.

I hope the enclosed article meets with your approval.

Very sincerely,
Laura J. Morris

"Still sits the schoolhouse by the road, A ragged beggar sunning" is not true any more of the New Lenox school. It was sold and torn down in 1928 and the grounds added to the Maplewood cemetery.

The old school bell called the children of New Lenox to school for many years and one of its last missions was to celebrate the end of World War I when with the two church bells it rang on Armistice Day until the clapper came unfastened and its voice was stilled temporarily.

The old school picture which appeared in the News Bulletin of Sept. 20 presents the entire enrollment in the two rooms in 1896. Miss Alice Rulifson taught down stairs and Mr. Chas. Francis taught upstairs. The slate is held by Elmer Wilson whose father was the local agent for the Wabash Railroad. He is now an undertaker in Fort Wayne, Indiana. Next to him on the left is the editor and owner of The News Bulletin who lived with his parents on the main business block of the town where his father the local cobbler, repaired the worn shoes of the villagers.

This group of buildings was destroyed by fire and consisted of Ward Knickerbocker's dry goods and drug store also post office, Semmler's shoe repair shop, and Wes Kennedy's meat market and stood where Mr. Hauck is now building.

At that time the school was heated by two large stoves which burned wood or coal and the pupils sat two in a seat. The pail of drinking water and the dipper stood in one corner of the school room and when a pail of fresh water was needed it was a coveted treat to pump it from the well at John Urch's home. At beginning of school a thornapple tree growing near the pump bore large and juicy thornapples which provided a reward.

The names of the early citizens of New Lenox appear in the following list of pupils as they are arranged in the picture.

1st row: Miss Rulifson, "Willie" Lynk Ella Searies (Brown) daughter of the doctor who served the whole community, Daisy Knickerbocker (Mrs. Will Lynk) Max Marvin, Lizzie Sass (Mrs. Emil Braun) Earl Davies, Alice Nelson (Mrs. Henry Miller) Jay Lynk, Flora Marvin, (Mrs. Albert Dodge) Frank Urch, Asher Holmes, Charley Francis.

Charley Francis was the eldest son of the late Chas. Francis of New Lenox and taught the local school for two years. Later he studied to be a doctor but death ended a promising career.

Miss Alice Rulifson taught a few of the years and eloped with Orrin DeLong the teacher who followed Mr. Francis. She passed away a short time later.

Eight of the pupils have also passed to their reward, eight still reside in New Lenox, four live in Florida and the others with a few exceptions, reside in neighboring towns.

Lockhart, Fla. Sept. 28, 1945

Dear Bill:

I was surprised and pleased to see the school picture of the year 1896. It brings back many pleasant memories. I believe I recognize all the students.

Pearl Harbor Counsel

William Dewitt Mitchell of New York, a lifelong Democrat who served as attorney general under President Hoover, has been appointed counsel for Pearl Harbor quiz.

EISENHOWER AND RUSSIANS
Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, a real diplomat, has been making progress toward friendship with the Russians, but got a setback the other day.

U. S. officials entering Eisenhower's office found him despondent. He was holding a copy of Time magazine.

"Look at that," he said, "six weeks' work gone."

Eisenhower pointed to a picture of a female entertainer in a Berlin night club standing on her head, legs apart, holding a picture of Stalin between them. Time had reproduced the picture.

"And just as I was making some progress with Marshal Zhukov," Eisenhower mourned. "First he would scarcely see me. But recently we have become pretty good friends. When I go into his office he says, 'Here's to Ike.'"

Eisenhower went on to tell how Zhukov was blazing mad over the Time magazine picture. He had just come from seeing the Russian commander who had demanded:

"What are you going to do about this?"

"Nothing," replied Eisenhower.

"What! You let the American press make mockery of the marshal?" exclaimed Zhukov.

"That's what we fought the war for—the right to criticize, the right for people to say what they please," said Eisenhower.

Eisenhower went on to explain to the Russian that because one newspaper or magazine published a picture of Stalin, it did not reflect the sentiment of either the American government or the American people, and that the American government scrupulously refrained from censoring the press on matters of this kind.

However, the Russians continue to be sensitive. It is hard for them to understand the difference between a regulated press as in the Soviet and a free press as in the U. S. A.

NEW SUPREME COURT JUSTICE
President Truman really let his hair down with Senator Burton when he called him in last week to tell him he was being nominated to the Supreme court.

Catching Burton just before the Ohio senator was about to leave for Cincinnati, Truman told him that he had actually promised the Supreme court job to another man, Robert Patterson, now secretary of war, but changed his mind.

"Harold," said Truman at the start of the interview, "I've made up my mind to appoint you to the Supreme court."

"You were always my first choice," Truman continued, "but I had some vacillations. I considered appointing Phillips of Denver, Parker of North Carolina and Patterson. Finally I decided to appoint Patterson and told him I was going to appoint him."

Truman then explained that it was better to leave Patterson in the war department to replace Stimson as secretary of war.

"One of the things that disturbed me about your appointment," Truman continued, "was the probable claim that I might be playing politics in order to get a Democratic senator from Ohio." (Truman had in mind the fact that Governor Lausche of Ohio, a Democrat, now can appoint a Democratic senator to replace Burton, a Republican.)

"So I talked it over with Alben Barkley," Truman explained, "and he advised that if I was convinced you were the right man, I should appoint you and let political consequences go hang."

Note—Truman had picked up Senator Barkley at Paducah, Ky., the evening before and flown him back to Washington in his special plane, at which time they had conferred regarding the Burton appointment. Truman, incidentally, seems to be leaning more and more on sage, experienced Barkley for advice.

CAPITAL CHAFF

President Truman still keeps up his rapid-fire early-morning appointment pace, sees as many as 15 visitors before lunch. Greek Publisher Basil Vliavianos visited Truman the other day, caught him sneaking a yawn and long stretch between callers.

A new breath of fresh air in the post office department: Gael E. Sullivan of Chicago, assistant postmaster general.

THE HOME FOSTERING CHRISTIAN IDEALS

LESSON TEXT—Deuteronomy 6:4-9; Luke 1:31, 32; Ephesians 5:22, 25, 6:1-4.
GOLDEN TEXT—Be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you.—Ephesians 4:32.

"Juvenile delinquency" is an expression often heard in our day. It speaks of the awful way in which our boys and girls have gone astray spiritually and morally in recent years. Fortunately, we are beginning to realize that most of the blame falls on the parents. It is parental delinquency in the matter of proper rearing of the children which needs our earnest attention.

The home is the right place for the fostering of Christian principles of living, but all too often even Christian people have put that whole load on the Sunday school and church. They can help, but they cannot do the job which should be done in the home.

Home should be a place where:

I. God's Word Is Accepted (Deut. 6:4-9).

The Bible teaches us the truth about God and that is information of the highest value and usefulness in the home. He is our God, and He is one God. There is no other God, and at the same time this infinite and eternal One is very close to us—our God. How precious!

The acceptance of the truth concerning God draws forth our love toward Him. He is not like the heathen gods who cause only cringing fear. He loves us and we love Him, with all our might (v. 5).

This Word of God and the truth concerning Him should be the normal and natural subject of conversation in the home.

Any time, night or day, and anywhere, in the house or on the street, it should be as easy for a boy to talk to his father about God as to discuss his school work, or sports, or any other thing.

Let's make it a natural, normal, accepted thing that God and His Word are talked about in the home.

II. Growth Is Expected (Luke 2: 51, 52).

In the well-ordered home the child finds his place as Jesus did, as an obedient, well-mannered, co-operative member.

There, too, is the natural place for normal, well-balanced development. There must first be growth in wisdom. The mind and will must be in control, lest the physical get out of hand. They must develop, even as the body grows. Thus the growth of the body becomes not just an animal development, but one amenable to proper restraints, cultivated and poised for full usefulness.

But the home fails if it does not at the same time give the child a chance to grow "in favor with God and man." The boy Jesus continued to grow in gracious personality, with both God and man as the interested recipients of the fruits of His spiritual development.

Every home should be a Christian home and every Christian home should be a center of normal growth for children. This should give us cultured Christian men and women for the next generation.

III. Love Is Expressed (Eph. 5: 22, 25).

Love is not just a warm and tender feeling hidden away in the heart. It shows in the homely details of daily life in the home.

A Christian wife expresses her affection for her husband by giving him his God-appointed place as head of the house. There is a graceful and voluntary submission to God's plan for the home which makes for order and unity. Happy is the woman who seeks that place and lives in it! Her life will be blessed!

A Christian husband will learn to control that natural masculine tendency to dominate. He will study the gentle art of courtesy and kindness affection. He will love his wife as Christ loved the Church, and that means a willingness to both live and die for her.

Christianity really should show forth at its very best in the home but, alas, so often just the contrary is true! Let us get that thing straightened out and keep it right!

IV. Rights Are Respected (Eph. 6:1-4).

Mutual devotion between husband and wife, and mutual trust between parents and children—there we have the basis of a real God-honoring home.

We must give attention to the matter of a fair and full recognition of the rights of others. The parent who rides roughshod over the wills of his children need not profess to be a true follower of Christ. Likewise, children who are disobedient and insolent to their parents have no real testimony for Christ.

This business of being a Christian is real. It calls for right living everywhere, and that must begin at home. In the home the parent and child must both learn and live the high standards of Christ.

Thunderhead

MARY O'HARA
W.N.U. FEATURES

THE STORY THUS FAR: Thunderhead, the only white horse ever foaled on Goose Bar ranch in Wyoming, is a throwback to a wild stallion, the Albino. Because of his speed, Thunderhead, is trained as a racer and entered in a meet in Idaho. A month before the race, Thunderhead wanders into a mountain valley, meets the Albino, kills him and takes over the herd of wild horses. Ken McLaughlin, Thunderhead's 14-year-old owner, recovers his horse a day before the race. During the big race Thunderhead acts up, shows amazing speed, then throws his jockey and leaps the fence. In another race, Touch and Go, another McLaughlin horse, wins. Greenway, a rich horse fancier, buys her.

CHAPTER XXVII

"I'm a collector of fine horses, my boy. That's the second one I've acquired this afternoon. Hop up on her now, son, and ride her over to my stables."

Mr. Greenway limped over to the filly. Rob caught Ken's arm and showed him the check. It was made out to Kenneth McLaughlin, and the amount was five thousand dollars.

Ken looked up at his father. Rob McLaughlin's big white teeth were flashing in a wide and joyful grin. "That does it, Ken!" he exclaimed. But Ken could only stare at his father's face, then at the check, and feel dazed.

Greenway called to Ken, "Take a last ride on her, son."

Ken thought over all that had happened and all that was going to happen. He and his father and Thunderhead were starting back to the ranch this day. Then Thunderhead would be gelded—plenty of money now to have Doc Hicks come to the ranch and do it—and then he would be sold to the army for a band horse. They brought the most money of all, his father had said, more than the army paid for ordinary horses. He might bring as much as three hundred dollars. White horses for cavalry bands were not easy to find.

Ken thought suddenly of getting on Thunderhead and running away with him. Turning him loose somewhere. Giving him away—

When they were getting ready to load the stallion, Ken asked, "Dad, is the reason you've got to geld him because you can't get rid of him unless you do?"

"Bright boy!" said Rob sarcastically. Then he put his hand on Ken's shoulder. "It's not the money, Ken—not any more, although three hundred dollars isn't to be sneezed at. But it's really because there's no other way to save Banner and to save myself, incidentally, from having to adopt about thirty wild mares."

Before eight o'clock they had the stallion in the trailer and had started the long drive back to the ranch.

The eagle headed into the strong westerly wind and hung on motionless wings high over the valley.

The "easterner" had blown itself out and no sign of it remained except for patches of snow under the trees and in the depressions of the hills. Here was summer again, Indian summer, with the quaking asp a riot of crimson and ochre and the cottonwoods shedding golden leaves on the surface of the river.

Ken McLaughlin was leading his stallion through the keyhole. As they emerged on the threshold of the valley they halted. The horse was saddled with the small horsehair saddle Ken had made himself. Underneath the bridle was a heavy chain halter and lead, and over his eyes a blindfold, but in spite of this he knew where he was and his body was tense, and fierce snorting breaths came from his nostrils.

He pawed the earth. With one hand Ken uncinched the girth, lifted the saddle off and dropped it on the ground. The glint of the sun on steel stirrups struck the eagle's eyes, and a sudden lift of his body registered the reaction. Again he spread his wings wide, circled and centered over the pass.

Ken undid the latch of the throat strap, talking softly to his horse. "You don't know it, Thunderhead . . . but this is good-by . . . you've got to go to your mares and take care of them and live a stallion's life . . . you're a true throwback, Thunderhead . . . you're not a race horse though you can go like the wind when you want to . . . and you're not an army horse prancing around carrying a kettledrum . . . and you've got to go back . . . and I've got to go to school and do a lot of other things . . . so . . . we . . . can't be together any more . . ."

Thunderhead's hoof dug impatiently at the earth. Ken slid his arm up underneath the stallion's neck and laid his own head against it. His voice went on while his fingers drew off the bridle, the chain halter, and at last the blindfold. "Don't forget me, Thunderhead . . . I won't forget you . . . never, Thunderhead . . ."

Ken stepped back, the stallion was free, and he knew it. He took a step forward, switching his tail. His head was high, his ears alert, his eyes roved over the valley. It was as if he counted every mare and colt grazing there a quarter mile or so away. But he seemed in no hurry to join them. They were all his, and now there was no one to dispute him.

He turned toward Ken again, poked out his head and gave the boy an affectionate shove. Ken slipped his arm around the stallion's nose. "But you've got to go, Thunderhead . . . those are your mares . . . I think you do know it's good-by . . ."

This farewell had attracted the attention of the mares. There came trotting out from the band the black mare with the white colt, her ears pricked inquiringly at Thunderhead. She neighed. He answered. He left Ken and went to meet her, lowering his head, curving and wagging it from side to side. His tail lifted, flared wide, and streamed behind him. And now all the mares were staring. They recognized him and rushed to meet him. They milled around him, kicking and nipping each other in the excited jealousy of having him back. Finally they settled down to the real business of life, which was grazing.

Ken watched it all with a smile on his face. At last he picked up the equipment he had dropped on the ground and went back through the keyhole to finish the business. He had spent hours with drill and sledge hammer working on the rock around and underneath that monster boulder which formed the roof of the keyhole. He had studied where each stick of dynamite should go. He did not intend that there should be a single one of those small slips or miscalculations which brought so many of his good intentions to naught. The dynamite was tamped into the holes, the fuses attached. Now he lit the fuses, turned and ran. He didn't stop running until he reached the place where he had picketed Flicka. He slipped his arm up underneath her head and held it against him so she would not be startled, and, standing so, waited for the explosion.

It came. The pile of boulders around and above the keyhole rose with a dull boom. The earth under Ken's feet seemed to heave. There was a frightened chattering of birds, and small animals scurried out of the rocks. A cloud of dust floated up from the passage. And as earth and rocks settled back again, the valley was filled with detonations caroming back from the hills. Last of all came a deep rumble from the Thunderer.

After some minutes Ken entered the passage to see exactly what had happened to the keyhole. It no longer existed. Just as he had planned, the support for the boulder had been blasted away, and with its fall, all the other boulders had found a new position. There were some crannies a cat or a small dog could have crawled through, but for Thunderhead the passage was closed for all time.

Ken retraced his steps, ran along the rampart until he came to the place Thunderhead had made the trail to the summit, and climbed up.

There was excitement amongst the mares over the blasting. Thunderhead was nowhere to be seen. Ken lay down, hanging his head over the edge, certain that the horse was below there, pawing at those stones, investigating every cranny, discovering that there would be no more going in and out of the valley. At least, thought Ken, not from this end. You might be able to find a way out the other end, old fellow, through those valleys and mountain passes and glaciers, but it would be a hundred miles around for you to get home, and all of it strange going—no—I think you'll stay in—

And then it was as if his father's fiery, commanding eyes were suddenly looking into his, and he spoke to them, "I've done it, dad. He won't come back to bother you any more. Or to kill Banner . . ."

His father! It was a warm and happy thing to remember how his father had looked at him and spoken to him and squeezed his shoulder even at that moment of disturbance getting ready to take his mother to the hospital. And the friendly words, "If you think you can do it, son, I'll leave it to you. I don't want to shoot your horse or geld him." And his mother had slipped her arm around his neck and kissed him and said, "Keep your fingers crossed, darling, we want a little flicka, don't we? And Ken—thanks to you and Touch And Go, I'm going away without the slightest worry about expenses—and I shall send out from the hospital and order a new negligee! Velvet! With feathers!"

Thunderhead came out from under the rampart at a gallop and rushed back to his mares. Ken leaped to his feet. What would he do now? What did he think about the blocked passage?

Thunderhead was heading away from this end of the valley as if that gunpowder were behind him. He began to round up his mares.

Ken watched it for the last time . . . the weaving in and out, the snaking head, the plunges of the mares as they felt the stallion's teeth in their haunches. . . .

The daylight was fading. Ken had to strain his eyes to see how every mare and colt was gathered up and swept into that rushing charge of pounding bodies and sweeping hair and flying limbs.

Wild exultation filled the boy. He had done it, after all! He had given back the mares to his horse! And this round-up! And a thousand others like it—and the valley and the snow-peaks and the river—

That other life he had tried to give Thunderhead—the life of a race horse—how desperately he had prayed for it! He felt almost bewildered. For all his prayers had been denied and all his efforts frustrated, and yet this—this—was the answer.

The boy's head lifted and his eyes flashed from crest to crest.

All the world was beginning to glow with the sunset. Three cream-colored antelopes were drinking at the edge of the river. The river was emerald green and turquoise blue and rose pink and there was a big golden star in it. Yellow light swept eastward from the sunset in long, level shafts. A half moon, lying on its back, began to glow like a lamp.

All this for Thunderhead! Thunderhead floated past the band of mares that now, in the gathering darkness, seemed like a swift-moving blot of shadow, and took the lead.

Ken strained his eyes to see the last of that rushing white form. Here it was, now, the parting. He put up his hand and brushed warm tears from his cheeks, surprised to find them there, because, in spite of the loneliness and the sense of bitter loss, it was as if the beauty of the valley and the gloriousness of Thunderhead's freedom were inside him too.

And now they were gone. In the deep breath that Ken drew, there was the wideness and the emptiness of the world.

It was time, and more than time, for Ken to go. Flicka was waiting. Once again it was just himself and Flicka, as it had been before Thunderhead, before Touch And Go. He ran down the trail, packed up, mounted, and was off.

Veterans' SERVICE BUREAU

EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper, through special arrangement with the Washington Bureau of Western Newspaper Union at 1616 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. Questions may be addressed to the above Bureau and they will be answered in a subsequent column. No replies can be made direct by mail, but only in the column which will appear in this newspaper regularly.

Veterans' Administration

Gen. Omar Bradley, new boss of the Veterans' administration succeeding General Hines, has moved with military dispatch in reorganizing the administration to provide better and more efficient service in behalf of the stream of veterans now being discharged from the services.

One of the most important changes made by General Bradley is a complete decentralization of all veterans facilities under the supervision of 13 branch offices. Obviously routine decisions can be made more promptly and more intelligently in a vast organization such as the Veterans' administration if they are not forced through a bottleneck in Washington.

Another change, one which had long been a subject for discussion, and oftentimes of criticism, was the medical service. The general now has separated and elevated the medical division to a higher status under command of Maj. Gen. Paul R. Hawley. Under this new arrangement, the new "surgeon general" will report direct to General Bradley.

The Veterans' administration is combining the government agencies and other channels for help and likely will emerge in the postwar era as one of the largest if not the largest governmental agency, handling as it will the affairs of some 12 million discharged veterans at one time or another. The administration has recently been the object of both congressional and private investigation as to conditions within the organization, conditions at Veterans' hospitals, treatment of patients, the tremendous shortage of physicians and nurses and other help and no doubt, it will be General Bradley's policy to eliminate immediately all situations which led to these investigations.

Questions and Answers

Q. I was discharged on February 24, 1943 by reason of "Sec. II, A.R. 615-360 and CDD." Will you explain the meaning of this. I will soon be 42 years of age. Is there any way I can volunteer for service in the occupational forces? — S., Rogersville, Tenn.

A. "This means that you were discharged under section 2 of the code governing discharge of veterans and "CDD" means a certificate of medical disability. In other words, you were discharged for a medical disability of some sort. The nature of your disability should be stated on your discharge. Yes, if you can pass the physical, the army is accepting volunteers for the occupational forces.

Q. How many points does a father of four children have who has been in service since last October 24 and across since July?—Mrs. R. B., Uhrichsville, Ohio.

A. The army point rationing system as of September 2 gives 1 point per month for time in service, 1 point per month for time overseas, 12 points for each child under 18 years with a maximum of three, and 5 points for each decoration or battle star. If your husband has no decorations or battle stars, he would have about 51 points. At this time 80 points are necessary for discharge, although the army has announced discharge for 70 points by October 1, 60 points by November 1 and elimination of the point system later in the winter.

Q. I am writing in regard to a soldier killed in Germany who made his insurance to a lady who raised him. After his death, his own mother came and claims she should get his insurance. Which one is entitled to the insurance?—Mrs. T. G., Water Valley, Miss.

A. If the soldier named the lady who raised him as beneficiary in his insurance, she is entitled to it and will get it notwithstanding the mother's claims.

Q.—My brother left high school recently to join the navy. Is my mother entitled to an allotment or allowance from the government if he allots the required $5? E. W., Rogersville, Tenn.

A.—Yes, providing your brother listed his mother as a dependent when he enlisted or was inducted into the service.

Q. If a member of the regular marine corps extends his enlistment while overseas and the extension has one more year before expiration, will he have to remain overseas until the expiration, if he has been overseas 20 months?—Mrs. W. D., West Memphis, Ark.

A. Not necessarily. The marine corps has set up a rotation for return to this country after 18 months service overseas. Extension of his enlistment would have no bearing upon the time he spent overseas. The chances are this marine will return soon for duty in the states.

Tinley Park PTA News

The Health program was enjoyed at our PTA meeting last Friday. Children of the First grade who were eligible, were presented the Health certificate by Miss Doyle, the school nurse.

She spoke on the Health and Habits of Our Youngsters Just Entering School. The sixth grade children, under the supervision of Miss Sandidge, had a display of Pre-Historic animals made of clay. They in turn explained to us about each animal and who had made it. This gave us a fine conception of the animals of Pre-historic days.

Mr. Garen Bohlin's talk on Bio Dynamics was very informative as well as humorous. His talk was received very favorably.

The attendance award was won by the Second grade. Honored guests of the day were: Mrs. L. Morrison, Council President, and Mrs. Schreiber, Council Summer Round Up Chairman.

Mrs. Lumbert would like everyone to come out and help sew for the Bazaar. The ladies will meet in the school Oct. 18 at 10:00 am. There will be a pot luck luncheon.

Mrs. Barrowell and Mrs. Oulman received at the door. Mrs. Morton and Mrs. Lumbert were hostesses at the Tea table.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES
The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, October 7, was:

"UNREALITY"

The Golden Text was:
"Thou art my portion, O Lord: ... Through thy precepts I get understanding: therefore I hate every false way" (Ps. 119: 57, 104).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible:

"Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful. But his delight is in the law of the Lord, and in his law doth he meditate day and night. And he shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; his leaf also shall not wither; and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper" (Ps. 1: 3-8).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy:

"Mystery does not enshroud Christ's teachings, and they are not theoretical and fragmentary, but practical and complete; and being practical and complete, they are not deprived of their essential vitality. The way through which immortality and life are learned is not ecclesiastical but Christian, not human but divine, not physical but metaphysical, not material but scientifically spiritual. . . . If our hopes and affections are spiritual, they come from above, not from beneath, and they bear as of old the fruits of the Spirit" (pp. 98, 451).

Off the Runway

Civil Air Patrol, Squadron 618-3
by 2nd Lt. Erlyne Conel

Picking up from last week, if you'll remember, I was weathered in at Pal-Waukee Airport. Passing the time "Hanger flying" with the swell flight office gang up there. During the tongue wagging they mentioned:

Famous Folks who Fly at Pal-Waukee: Here are some of the radio artists who rate High On and In the Air! Pal-Waukee is the home port of narrator Johnnie Neblett, announcers Chas. Irving and Eddie Roberts, band leader Gay Claridge and actresses Mary Lou Noumeyer and Angeline Orr. Angeline has signed a movie contract. Now in addition to flying toward the stars, she's on her way to becoming one. Charley Armour of the famous packing company and Peter Fox of Fox DeLuxe also spread wings from the port at Milwaukee Avenue and the River.

Charley McCarthy's No Dummy! Recently Edgar Bergen, a licensed private pilot, stopped at Pal-Waukee. Because he hadn't been kicking the controls around for sometime, he did the smart thing. He asked for a check flight. The instructor who ok'd him said he had a hilarious time while they were flying. Before he could correct Bergen, Bergen would correct himself. And he'd use Charley McCarthy's voice! Can't you just hear Charley wise cracking, "Look Bergen, there's another plane over there, with a girl pilot. Hey! don't get so close, watcha tryin' to do, pull a Squeeze Play?"

German Parachute for Leaving High Speed planes at Low Altitudes. When a jumper leaves a plane flying low at high speed, and pulls the chute open immediate he often suffers a severe shock. According to Ray Cuny, associated with the Rupert Parachute Service at Pal-Waukee, a new captured German chute overcomes this problem. It's made in two inch strips of silk tape, with air space between each strip. When the rip cord is pulled the air goes thru the openings, then the openings get smaller and the two inch strips come closer together as air fills the chute. Ray stated that during a jump over Pal-Waukee, the chute proved itself practical. However, Warrant Officer Floyd Orrington (who is planning to jump over Rubinkam airport next Saturday and Sunday for the Civil Air Patrol Air show) states the German chute opens gently, but lands almost too fast for comfort.

Air Show Plus! What could be better on a Saturday and Sunday fall afternoon than to be enjoying the great out of doors, with the sky above you filled with excitement. Bring the entire family out; to Rubinkam Airport next Saturday and Sunday (October 13 and 14.) Each day at two o'clock a gigantic CAP Victory Air Show will start. The program includes jumps, acrobatics, formation flying, special acts. Civil Air Patrol members from all Squadrons in the Group are going all out to make this one of the largest in years. Don't miss it! Proceeds will be used to train the youth of America, including local CAP Cadets in aviation, ground subjects, leadership and good citizenship. Come to Rubinkam Airport Saturday and Sunday, the 13th and 14th. It will be well worth your while.

Ford Lansing Airport is now Chicago Hammond Transcontinental Airport. The new manager, Mr. Dow, is going ahead full throttle on improvements. New Butler steel hangers and an 80 by 100 ft. brick and concrete building are going up. The latter will house a complete plane service shop, engine repair shop, printing shop, an office and a lounge. Present building will be transformed into a restaurant. The field is going to get its face lifted, too, with landscaping and new field markings. Here's something good that's already been aided. Its Lois Zelesky, a gal who looks cuter than a bug's ear in her grease monkey outfit. She's working on the line, greasing and painting ships, to get her flying. More horsepower to you Lois. Harriet Drake, the girl in the flight office now has 18 hours solo towards her Private. Harold Riggs, Roscoe Haycock and Robert Bernstein have all made that thrilling first solo. There's a new instructor, too Harold McCartin.

The new owner of Rubinkam Airport J. A. Langenderfer of Flossmoor, who has flown from Rubinkam for years, is planning on building concrete runways and putting up buildings, including a flight office and restaurant. All with the high aim of making Rubinkam one of the most modern airports in this part of the country. With his years of experience as a pilot, Mr. Langenderfer should know exactly what a pilot wants. By the skyway, Sailor Thorgeron is now sailing upstairs. He just made his first solo. Wing Dips: I respectfully dip my wings to a swell guy and flyer, 2nd Lt. Jack Morton, who went up after his commercial license, and got it. A wing dip also goes to the Quaker Oil Burner Co. and its President Mr. Al Atwill, for furnishing the good looking, efficient burner for the Civil Air Patrol Clubhouse at Rubinkam airport. Next week: A birdsman's eye view of Howell Airport. That's all for now.

WOUNDED RETURNEES PREPARING FOR CIVILIAN JOBS AT MIAMI BEACH

"Keeping 'em down on the farm after they've seen the world," should be no problem, according to officers of the AAF Regional and Convalescent Hospital at Miami Beach, Florida.

"Many wounded returnees," reports Maj. John D. Brett, chief of the hospital's Convalescent Services division "have signed up for correspondence course in agricultural subjects offered by the United States Armed Forces Institute. Many men from large cities look forward to settling down on a little truck-and-poultry farm after discharge. For men exposed to the rigors of extended combat duty, this would have a definite therapeutic value."

USAFI agricultural courses include dairy farming and cattle production, farm management, soils and crops, sanitation and disease control, vegetable farming, and farm forestry.

For farm-bound soldiers with a journalistic bent, the rural newspaper holds a special appeal.

"The countryweekly," observes Maj. Brett, "would seem an excellent field for men who need to forget the stress and strain of battle. The bustling healthy atmosphere of rural life, the beauty of the changing seasons, and the neighborly spirit of farm folks can do any returning soldier a lot of good."

"While the army makes no attempt to train men specifically for rural journalism, every man interested in such a career is given all possible help while he is a patient at Miami Beach."

In the AAF hospital's huge print shop, T-Sgt. Robert J. Bryson, Waynesville, N. C., aids soldier patients

In getting out the "Convalescent Chat-ter," weekly newspaper of the hospital five units. Patients may also study typography, typesetting, photolithography, and photography. Further instruction is available in feature writing, modern news reporting, business law, state and federal government, and studies in rural society, all offered by the United States Armed Forces Institute.

Poultry House Lighting

keeps fall and winter
egg production at a peak

Egging them on to greater production by making their layers work from 12 to 14 hours a day is one of George Middleton's successful poultry-raising secrets, too. His automatic time clock wakes them up and puts them to work while he is still sleeping.

Ask Lester Schroeder of Peotone how he side-steps the slump in egg production that usually comes in fall and winter months; and he has the answer right at his finger-tips—his light switch. Poultry house lighting, he'll tell you, lengthens the hens' laying day and keeps them putting in more over-time on the egg production line.

Just a few small bulbs and an automatic time switch are all you need to get the birds up earlier in the morning—to keep them working later in the evening. Plan now, before the dark days set in, to light up your poultry house for extra eggs . . . extra profits.

Electricity for poultry house lighting and other farm chores is available to more than 87% of all the farms in the area served by this Company.

TOO much has already been written about the "T." And yet it is surprising the number of sidliners who keep writing in to ask just what the "T" is and how it works. We'll try, with no promise of success, to make it simple—for the last time.

1. The "T" doesn't demand old-fashioned blocking or hard body pressure. It depends more on speed and deception.

2. It needs a hard-hitting full-back who can split an opened line.

3. It needs a fast-moving back who can circle a massed or tightened line.

4. It demands a good passer who can work with deception and smooth ball-handling.

These latter three qualities put heavy pressure

Grantland Rice

Creighton Miller, Kelly and two or three good fullbacks. They fell far away when Bertelli left, who was not only a great passer but the smoothest and trickiest ball-handler I've seen around. Ask Rip Miller, Captain Johnny Whelchel of Navy or Bill Alexander of Georgia Tech.

It's true that the old Bears and Notre Dame's 1943 squad would have been hard to handle under any system. Material makes the system more than any system ever made material. And material has made more coaches than any coaches ever made material.

The main answer to football success is your playing strength—the forward wall and the backfield—your man power. And don't ever let anyone tell you a different story. Football coaches have done great jobs. Their general average is the highest in sport. But the best still need good football players to have winning teams.

After all, they can't rush out on the field and do their own passing, running, blocking and tackling.

Sports Fans' Squawks

Sports fans who move up into the 50 or 60-million class, ranging from ages between 10 and 80 years, are certainly entitled to their beliefs, their squawks, their praise and their blame.

For, after all, they are the big part of sport, the major part by at least 90 per cent. They pay all the expenses, all the salaries. They make both amateur and pro sports possible. And in too many cases they only get shoddy treatment and take the big shove around by both amateur and professional promoters.

They are taken for granted. They are rarely given any consideration from baseball, football, racing, boxing, golf or other sporting directors. They are usually the goats, who have grown accustomed to taking the worst of it. Their hardihood and their capacity for punishment is the most amazing feature of sport.

They are too often packed in after the manner of human sardines at race tracks and other sporting centers. They are too often overcharged.

It has been said there is no law that forces them to take this beating. This is true. But they happen to love their games, whether it is boxing, baseball, football, racing, golf or something else.

They are astonished at little courtesies they are so seldom shown anywhere or any time by the hired people who live off their main outlet for recreation and entertainment.

They are really an amazing breed. They take it on the chin and on the shin, back of each ear, in the stomach and also in the pocketbook.

Courses Too Tough

Take golf, for example. It has always been my belief that any golf course should be trapped only for the star player. Put all trouble out beyond the 200 yard mark which the average player can't reach.

The duffer or average player has enough trouble trying to hit the ball or get his bogeys. Why should he pay uncounted millions to make his golfing life more miserable?

We have built too many golf courses against the skill of the pros and the crack amateurs who, after all, give most of their life to golf—and who pay nothing in return.

Who cares whether a pro shoots a 63 or a 53? Why build courses to keep him from breaking par on courses which the average golfer can't handle in a 95?

The Nelsons and the other part-breaking stars are a breed apart. Let them go around in even 3's. Who cares? But why keep punishing the 98 per cent who pay all the freight?

Golf is our greatest playing game for everyone. It is a friendly and a companionable game, demanding its share of psychology, philosophy, sportsmanship and nerve control—as well as physical skill.

Sterilamp Proven Poultry Health Aid

Lowers Mortality and Ups Egg Production

By lessening the infectious organisms in the air, diminishing fungus and mold producing mycosis and pneumonia, and by promoting generally better health, the ultraviolet rays or sterilamp has become of commercial value in the poultry house.

Made of finger size, tubular pieces of quartz-like glass, these lamps emit a selected band of ultraviolet radiations in the bactericidal portion of the spectrum.

An installation of Westinghouse sterilamps in a poultry house at New Hope, Pa., fights poultry infections and improves vigor and health of hens while they sleep.

Tests have shown that irradiated birds have a tendency to level out the peaks and valleys of the egg-laying season with the gain reaching to 15 per cent, most of which comes during the winter months.

The greatest use on the poultry farm has been in the brooding of chicks. It has been proven that not only has mortality been greatly reduced by the application of bactericidal lamps, but that vigor and gain in weight of the chicks has been materially improved.

Even when the lamps are kept operating over the roosts all night, the hens rest perfectly, and gain in general health. The lamps have been given thorough tests on individual poultry farms and tests are now being conducted at various state experimental stations.

These invisible bullets of light, sprayed by the sterilamp ultraviolet tube, has given the poultry raiser a new weapon to fight his present high rate of mortality.

Agriculture In the News W. J. DRYDEN

While a method of extracting sugar from sugar beets was discovered by a German chemist in 1774, it was not until 1870 that the first successful factory was built in the United States.

A new hybrid, promising 20 per cent increase in yield, and the pill form of sugar beet planting, promises to place postwar sugar beet raising on a profitable basis. The pill's coating contains fertilizer and insecticide, with the seed in the center.

Among the uses of sugar beets and their by-products are galacturonic acid, citric acid, carbonate of lime, rubber, road base, bombs, powder, plastics, penicillin base, medicines, adhesives, alcohol, electrodes, castings, textile, varnishes, radio tubes, and the Nazis made fortification cement from the pulp.

Casing for Stone

Auto Tire Casing Holds Bath of Water for Grindstone.

Instead of tin can for permitting water to drop on top of grindstone, a casing that is water tight and shaped so that the stone turns in comparatively deep water, may be utilized as shown.

Quick Blood-Building

By the feeding of abundant riboflavin or vitamin B2, in addition to ample protein, iron, copper and the B-complex vitamin known as pyridoxine, it is possible to effect remarkably quick recovery from the type of anemia of livestock caused by hemorrhage, according to work at the University of Wisconsin.

In the past, it has taken from six to eight weeks to regenerate the blood after hemorrhage, or even after transfusion.

On the New York Scenic Railway:

The long parade and the exciting band music in the fierce rains and winds north along Fifth Avenue—with hardly anyone among the pedestrians brave enough to pause and watch. (What dope insisted upon that parade, anyhow, in such pneumonia weather?) ... The knots of nuts clattering up Columbus Circle—exercising their Constitutional rights with double talk about the next war. ... The blinking electric lights on the Broadway signs embellished by the penmanship of the furiously falling rain. ... The 59th Street management's reply to freezing tenants: "No heat until October 1st!" The Waldorf has it, however. ... Miss Liberty, everyone's favorite pin-up gal, winking happy hellos to shiploads of returning veterans, who fought for her honor.

The cacophony of buses, taxis, trolleys, cars (and women) as they merge at 34th and Broadway in what seems like an inextricable tangle—then miraculously emerge again without a fender dented—a symphony of NYClatter. ... The aroma of oncoming autumn heralding the return of King Football and rah-rah-coon coats—the signal that Ma Nature's getting set to wield her brush with those magic browns, yellows and reds. ... Staten Island's shore line still brimming with the implements of war. ... Newly indoctrinated soldiers, without war ribbons—looking like overgrown Boy Scouts.

Broadway, washing her face of war paint, trimming her wartime hustle and bustle and setting her coiffure with the brightest of lights for the postwar hoopla. ... Faces and facades, absent for too long, reappearing with joyous smiles, like exiles who've been given a reprieve. ... The red, white and blue service flags now flecked here and there with stars of gold—grim reminders of those who fought the good fight and won't come back. ... The be-medaled private, cane in hand, strutting down 7th, tilting his MacArthur corncob pipe at a jauntily precarious angle.

The book stores along the Gayer White Way advertising "Social Dancing" instead of "How to Prepare for Your Army I. Q. Test" ... The 42nd St. Army & Navy stores offering "Tailor-Made Sailor Suits" at reduced prices. ... Drug-stores with signs shouting, "Yes, We Have Bobby Pins." ... The honey-sweet "Thank you" from the cutie behind the ciggie counter at the Waldorf. ... The dance hall on 7th Ave. where the GIs go to cut a rug on Saturday nights. It is called "The Midtown Youthopia." ... The subways, returning to their eerie dawn-patrolling—half empty, looking semi-nude without their early ayem sleepy war workers.

The chattering in Bryant Park trying to figure out what's worth arguing about. ... The medieval architecture of St. Patrick's, getting its modern face-lifting—grudgingly yielding to the hordes of busy workers while kids feed the pigeons on the steps. ... The faded picture of FDR almost hidden in the side window of a downtown picture gallery. ... The wisies who diller-dollared their war time moo on nonsense and frillies—eyeing the Wise Men who sunk theirs in bonds—and are holding on to them. ... The big, new department store being dug at 53rd and 7th, with a knot hole fence knee high. ... Sign in the window of a 72d Street eatery—"Waiter Wanted—Bring References."

The colorful ribbon of light whirling around the neck of the Times Bldg. waving all that good news to the Broadway gapers. ... The Brooklyn Navy Yard and its half finished ships. ... The one-armed window gazer on Madison and 43rd with battle ribbons on his gray flannel civvies. ... The long line of want-addicts in front of the Madison Avenue U. S. Employment offices. ... The Bowery joynt offering a "Victory Bath" and shower for a dime. ... A returning air force captain being greeted with a sticky "heloooo, dahleeeennnn" from a sub-deb in an East Fiftieth subcellar. ... The Tower of Babel that congregates in the St. Moritz lobby and spills out on the sidewalk. ... That "situations wanted" ad in the Times of a well known war analyst.

A ferry dawdling across the Hudson like a glacier of molasses. ... The tattered shoes of shoeshine boys. ... The Belasco Theatre's unique marquee with its hanging lanterns. ... The Players Club where thespian Edwin Booth once lived. The furnishings in his room remain intact. ... The Waldorf's opulent residential suites decorated with garden terraces. ... The two-story frame structure wedged in among Convent Avenue's tenements—built by Alexander Hamilton as his country home.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

Although the Germans manufactured and used synthetic rubber in volume long before America, a general superiority of the American synthetic rubber over the German product has been established by technologists.

To obtain enough rubber to make a tire for a low-priced car, two rubber trees must be tapped for a whole year.

Longer, more uniform tire life, constant goal of tire manufacturers, is now being achieved through use of a new type of synthetic rubber developed by B. F. Goodrich.

Steering wheels of post-war cars may be cushioned with a covering of synthetic rubber.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up at night, leg pain, swelling—feet constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have been more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!
